PUSH VICE WAR DESPITE JURY'S "NO BILL" REPORT

McKinley Urges Warrants for Lax Police.

"It is absolutely impossible for any private organization to police a city the size of Chicago and we do not propose to undertake it. But we do intend to give up our fight to fix the responsibility for the failure of the police to curb commercialized vice."

This was the answer last night of the Juvenile Protective association, to the question as to whether that organization will follow the suggestion of Judge Michael L. McKinley, chief justice of the Criminal court, in obtaining warrants charging "palpable omission of duty" against public officials who fail to close houses of prostitution after formal notice has been served upon them.

Judge McKinley's suggestion was made in open court yesterday to Attorney Harry Smoot, counsel for the association, after the February grand jury, the second inquisitorial body to be charged with the duty of investigating vice conditions this year, submitted a report holding the police blameless for the existence of "open and flagrant prostitution," protesting against the "heckling" of the police department, and criticizing municipal judges for failure to cooperate with the police in letting old offenders off with light fines.

Judge McKinley refused to file the report in the form submitted, announcing that he would expunge certain portions as "extraneous" and called upon the press to publish the full list of the members of the jury so that the fathers and mothers of the city might know to whom to express their opinion of the report.

Judge McKinley's suggestion was submitted to them at the evidence sessions to that of existing vice conditions. Fifteen jurors asserted enough evidence had been presented to them to convince them that open prostitution exists. O. O. Carpenter, foreman, said vice was most prevalent in police districts 3 and 2A, the district bounded by 23d street, Wentworth avenue, 39th street, and the lake.

The foreman estimated fifty houses are being operated in that territory; two jurors placed the number at 200, and seventeen raised their hands when the court inquired how many estimated at least a hundred.

"Now, do you know of any particular house or houses where prostitution is permitted and where there is not proper vigilant enforcement, in your opinion, of the law?" asked Judge McKinley.

The jurors were called by name, and all but two answered in the affirmative. The court then asked how many jurors were convinced that vice exists in spite of all that the police department can do to repress it. Seventeen hands were raised.

Drawn by Fairbank.
Judge McKinley then asked who had drafted the report. The foreman stated that Assistant State's Attorney Roy Fairbank had assisted the jury, but that it had been adopted by a majority vote. Several jurors announced the report had been adopted with their disapproval.

The court inquired if Attorney Thomas Marshall, advising the jury on points at law, had not informed them there was no evidence to substantiate it, to predict indictments, Attorney Marshall said he had given no such advice, but simply had submitted the evidence. The judge then asked who had given the information concerning the "heckling" of the police and one juror admitted that portion of the report was "based on the testimony of the police themselves."

Rules Out Criticism.
"If this jury wishes to suggest the passage of an ordinance this court is not the place to do it," said Judge McKinley. "Your criticism of the courts will not be allowed to remain in this report in the absence of anything to show you have evidence to substantiate it. I shall communicate with Chief Justice Olson of the Municipal court and ask him to be heard before the grand jury on this matter."

Judge McKinley communicated with Judge Olson by phone and the matter was brought up at the meeting of municipal judges in the afternoon, with the result that Attorney Charles N. Woodrow and John H. S. Lee will appear before Judge McKinley this morning to move that certain passages of the report be expunged.

"Indict or Let Alone."
"The grand jury under the law must either indict or let alone," said Judge Olson. "It must either put up or shut out. It cannot libel or slander in its reports. A judge who would permit thousands or libelous statements to be submitted in a grand jury report is himself a party to the libel."

Judge Olson said he believed the majority of the grand jury towards the Municipal court had been stirred up by certain testimony introduced purporting to show Judge P. T. Trude in the Morris court was not cooperating with the police.

Mellon's Former Wife Engaged

Mrs. Nora Mellon, divorced wife of the secretary of the treasury, has taken out a license to be married to Harry Arthur Lee, a New York dealer in art and antiques, who is fourteen years her junior.

Jurors, which ended with the statement that he would "leave the report to the verdict of public opinion," Judge McKinley turned to Attorney Smoot and suggested that he serve formal notice upon the chief of police, the sheriff, the coroner and the state's attorney as to the existence of houses of prostitution and that if they were not then closed within a reasonable period to ask for warrants charging them with palpable omission of duty.

"I shall take no action at all until I am advised as to what the association wishes to do," said Attorney Smoot later.

All Places Not Closed.

"I do not believe that all of the places have been closed," said Miss Binford. "Some of them have, but others have not. But that is not the point. Even if we should follow Judge McKinley's suggestion and succeed in having some of these places closed they would move next door and go on. Then it would be our task to find where they had moved to and make another report. It would take more than a hundred investigators to do this."

"We didn't want indictments issued as much as we wanted the responsibility fixed. This jury did not do. We were prepared to submit the result of two years' work along this line. We didn't present all our evidence. Before we had presented it all they began calling in the police as witnesses. This report is simply an admission that the police are unable to cope with vice in Chicago, that the vice interests are above the law, and it is an invitation to vice organizations all over the country to come to Chicago, that this is a safe place to operate."

Members of the Jury.

The members of the grand jury were: O. O. Carpenter, 338 South Brainerd avenue, La Grange, foreman; Michael B. Gleason, 1511 West 50th street, Sidney B. Bolling, 5941 North Sawyer avenue; Robert O. Johnson, 5411 West Ohio street; Matthew F. Paul, 1092 North Francisco avenue; Albert P. Madlener, 4 West Burton place; Herman Rosenthal, 4601 Rice street; George B. Boyce, 5414 West Adams street; Joseph Greenberg, 852 North Leominster avenue; John A. Zehl, 429 Humphrey avenue, Oak Park; William B. O'Brien, 7611 South Sangamon street; Albert S. Johnson, 6008 South Sangamon street; Charles Young, 842 West Marquette road; William D. Igoe, 3300 West Jackson boulevard; Harry A. Bannister, 4487 North Christiana avenue; E. Siebel, 4134 Clarendon avenue; Charles A. Rizer, 5005 Iowa street; George F. Towne, 2381 East 70th street; F. H. Clarke, 619 West Madison street; Samuel O. Stewart, 2131 Orrington avenue, Evanston; Richard J. O'Hare, 4308 West Monroe street; Herbert L. White, 1106 South Roman street; George L. Larson, 4449 North Whipple street.

Heads of several reform organizations notified Judge McKinley they will take some action in regard to the grand jury's report within the next few days.

STATE DEMANDS DEATH FOR 3 IN LANUS SLAYING

Says Community Safety
Is at Stake.

Demand that "Larry" Heffernan, William Cramer and Otto Christensen, notorious west side gangsters, pay with their own lives for the murder of Joseph Lanus, wealthy automobile dealer, were made by Assistant State's Attorney William Scott Stewart in an impassioned closing argument late yesterday to the jury trying the three men for Lanus' murder last November.

"The state of Illinois demands that you gentlemen send these cold blooded murderers to the gallows in payment for the crime they committed," Mr. Stewart shouted across the bar in Judge John R. Caverly's courtroom.

"If you bring in a verdict of guilty and set the punishment at death you will be doing a great justice to the law abiding people of this community. You will be giving a warning to the members of the underworld engaged in the practice of robbing and murdering our fellow citizens that such acts shall not go unpunished."

As the words of Mr. Stewart rang out through the courtroom, the three defendants seated a few feet away stirred uneasily in their chairs. Heffernan dropped his eyes to the floor and moistened his lips. Cramer leaned out in a confused manner and spoke to his attorney. The third man stared at a spot on the wall straight ahead.

Behind the railing were friends of the three men. Women wiped away stray tears. Others curled their lips in the manner characteristic of the underworld and spoke to friends in the next seat.

Outlines Robbery Attempt.
Of Bogolowski (a member of the gang who turned "state's evidence") that Heffernan, Cramer, Christensen, and Bogolowski went to Lanus' saleroom shortly before 7 o'clock on the night of November 24 for the purpose of robbing him of several diamonds he carried, the prosecutor said.

"Cramer and Heffernan went in, according to Bogolowski, while he and Christensen waited outside. What happened then? Cramer went up to Lanus and asked about a car offered for sale. Lanus was suspicious and had his hand on a revolver in his side pocket. Did that deter them? No."

"Instead of turning and going out, Cramer pulled his revolver and ordered the man to hold up his hands. Lanus replied by pulling his gun and firing at the bandit. Then Heffernan, the little rat, shoved his gun into Lanus' back and fired."

"What should be done with such men? I can answer that. Put their necks in a noose."

Defense Claims Woman's Plot.
Mr. Stewart began his arguments shortly after 2 o'clock. He was followed by Attorney Eugene McGarry and Harold O'Connell for the defense. Both of the latter attorneys attributed the charges against their clients to jealousy on the part of Julie Hartnett, former "queen" of the gang, who testified for the state and to Bogolowski.

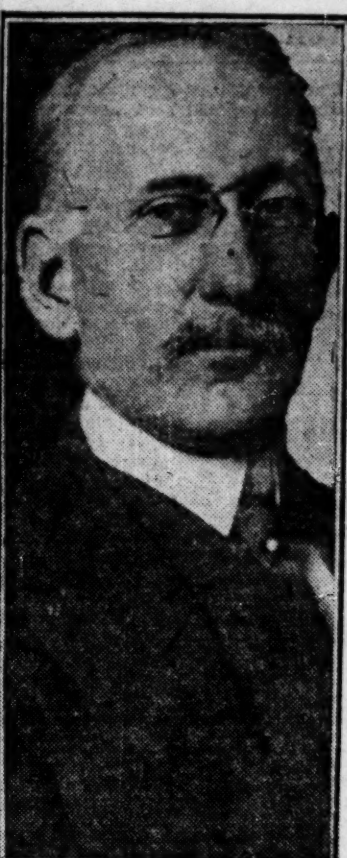

"These two creatures were in bad and to save their own skins laid the burden of the crime on the three men now on trial," said Mr. McGarry. Earlier in the day Heffernan caused a sensation when he leaped to his feet on the witness stand and, raising his hand above his head, cried, "I swear to God that I did not kill Joe Lanus."

First Assistant State's Attorney Edgar A. Jones will make the final closing argument this afternoon, and the case will be given to the jury.

War Minister of France
Demands Army of 600,000
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
PARIS, March 2.—"Every nation is entitled to an army necessitated by its policies," Minister of War Maginot told the senate this afternoon in advocating a bill increasing compulsory service to eighteen months. He asserted that France must have thirty-two divisions, or an army of more than 600,000 men, saying that Germany's defeat yesterday means a war of revenge tomorrow. The socialists are demanding reduction of the army to 200,000 men and compulsory service to ten months.

Former Official of Bank
Admits Theft of $55,000

CALLED BY DEATH

William G. Beale, prominent Chicago lawyer, dies at his home.

NEVER SHOOT A LION; JUST GRAB HIM BY HIS TAIL

When you are confronted by a lion after your ammunition is exhausted and your dogs are tired—grab him by the tail, and when you have hung on for a while, turn the tail over to a guide or other assistant. Then remove your coat and place it firmly over the lion's head. All you have to do is choke him to death.

The foregoing rules for lion hunting were set down yesterday by Stanley R. Graham, house decorator and former chauffeur for "Teddy" Webb, first of Chicago's auto bandits. A man who there understood the meaning of the word "lion" in the underworld.

A town idler had aimlessly jotted down the license number of an automobile he saw in front of the Madison, Ill., bank, not knowing of the robbery going on inside. Later this number was found to be that of a car owned by "Miss Clark," 1265 Leland avenue, Chicago. However, she was never found there.

Detectives watching newspaper "personals" took up her trail through a pretended message and located her in Cincinnati, O. A man who there posed as Clark turned out to be Gus Zeidler, de luxe robber, café owner, and "prominent citizen" of Evansville, Ind., who, with Alexander McKeown, was convicted later of the Madison robbery.

Clark's body was later found in the Missouri river, his throat cut. It was learned he objected to receiving only $2,700 as his share of the proceeds.

Tried to Give Alibi for Friends.
May Clark, who then called herself Margaret Edwards, testified in the trial that Zeidler and McKeown were in her Leland avenue apartment at the time of the bank robbery. This brought her a sentence of one to ten years for perjury. Zeidler is still in Chester penitentiary.

"She has been a model prisoner," said Mrs. Russell, the superintendent, last night. "She started in the laundry and finally became a stenographer. Then she became interested in the Braille work through the Englewood Women's club. Her parole papers must be signed before she is actually released and we are now waiting for their return from her eastern friends."

George Gould's Attorney
Exonerated in Stock Deal
New York, March 2.—[Special.]—The appellate division of the Supreme court in a decision handed down today unanimously exonerated Thomas L. Chadbourne Jr., charge of unprofessional conduct, the outgrowth of the George J. Gould case.

Mr. Chadbourne was attorney for Mr. Gould and received a fee of $125,000 in a Western Union stock deal in 1909. In 1917 heirs of Jay Gould charged mismanagement and the bar association began an investigation of Mr. Chadbourne's part in the deal. Presiding Justice Clarke, writing today's decision, said there was nothing unethical or unprofessional and that the charges are not proven.

WORK FOR BLIND WINS PAROLE FOR EX-GANG "QUEEN"

She Transcribes Classics
While in Cell.

Juliet penitentiary received its prettiest woman convict four years ago. She was May Clark of Chicago, an associate of bandits for whom she committed paroled yesterday. Now she is free, paroled yesterday, but a changed woman. Her comeliness is the same, but her aim in life is to dedicate herself to Red Cross work for the benefit of the blind.

May Clark is now 30, an accomplished stenographer and an expert in writing Braille characters, by which the blind are enabled to read through the sense of touch. She lost fifty pounds in the penitentiary and is peniless, but gained the friendship of New York Red Cross officials through her transcription of an eighty page volume of classics into Braille characters for blinded ex-soldiers. In addition she is a talented musician.

Former Wife of Early "Auto Bandit".
At the time of her arrest in June, 1918, she was the wife, or widow, of "Teddy" Clark, a bank robber and former chauffeur for "Teddy" Webb, first of Chicago's auto bandits. A man who there understood the meaning of the word "lion" in the underworld.

A town idler had aimlessly jotted down the license number of an automobile he saw in front of the Madison, Ill., bank, not knowing of the robbery going on inside. Later this number was found to be that of a car owned by "Miss Clark," 1265 Leland avenue, Chicago. However, she was never found there.

THEY WERE STILL ENGAGED AS WE WENT TO PRESS

Charlie Gives a Love Feast to Pola.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 2.—Pola Negri, Polish tragedienne, and Charlie Chaplin, comedian, were still "made up" tonight, so much so, in fact, that Charlie invited her to a "love feast" at his home and she accepted the invitation.

That was the first result tonight of what Pola termed their "little lovers' spat" of last night.

Her emotional reaction to Charlie's alleged statement that he was "too poor" to marry her "just now" resulted in a six hour break in their engagement to marry, and the motion picture world waited, almost breathless, until they had effected a reconciliation. The reconciliation was effected shortly after midnight this morning.

He Said He Didn't Say It.
Charlie told Pola that he did not say the cruel words credited to him, and he told newspaper men that if he did say them, and he did not recall having said them, he did not mean them, and besides, if he did say them, he must have said them in a spirit of humor, to avoid making a definite answer to their importunings for the exact date of the Negri-Chaplin nuptials.

It was announced to the world tonight the two stars had reached an agreement not to marry until each had concluded the motion pictures upon which they are engaged at present. This would deter the wedding until "early summer" at least, it was said.

Pola Feels So Fatigued.
Pola's invocation of the tragic muse yesterday and last night left her indisposed for work today. She remained in bed much of the time in order to be ready for the "love feast" to which her fiancé invited her and a few close friends, believed to be Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, at the Chaplin home tonight.

As for Charlie, he worked hard at the studio on a forthcoming picture, but tore himself from his overzealous shoes and baggy trousers in time to rush home to give the dinner and his preparations his personal attention. And the motion picture world again is quiet.

WALSKA SLIPS INTO CITY; HEARS RUSSIAN OPERA

Revive Talk of Appearance as Guest Artist.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.
Ganna Walska McCormick, Polish diva, swept into the Auditorium theater last night, a few steps behind her new sister-in-law, Mrs. Edmonia Blaine, to attend a performance of the Russian opera.

Mrs. Harold McCormick, bride of the former head of the International Harvester company, was piloted out of the theater last night, down an alley, and into the McCormick car by Mrs. Blaine.

Between the first and second acts of the opera, somebody had discovered the identity of the two women in seats 6 and 8, row P, on the left hand side. From then on Chaplins on the stage divided honors with Ganna Walska McCormick in the audience.

Rises to Applaud.
When the singer rose in her seat at the conclusion of a solo and clapped enthusiastically, more than half the house leaned forward to catch a glimpse of the lady's ear-caps that dangled vigorously.

The new Mrs. McCormick came to town silently and secretly late yesterday afternoon. Early in the evening three seats in row O were purchased for Mrs. Blaine, Mrs. McCormick and her manager, Jules Dalber. Later the two women changed their seats.

For the last week, according to information received by the Russian Opera company, the Polish singer has been expressing a desire to hear the Russians, and has indicated, it is reported, no great aversion to appearing as a guest artist.

Managers in Conference.
But when news came suddenly to Monsieur S. Huruk, manager of the company, that the tentative new artist was sitting down in front, the Russian became dubious. In the next intermission, the impresario, Leo Feodoroff, held a long conference with Dalber.

"Nothing at all, absolutely nothing," Dalber declared. "Mrs. McCormick is here as a private citizen. She will have within five days for the Pacific coast and Mr. McCormick." He refused to comment on the possibility of her singing in concert in Mr. McCormick's home town.

Likes Russian Opera.
If Mrs. McCormick decides to sing with the Russians, there are two available roles, it was pointed out last night by the impresario, who already knows that of Sniegurochka, in the "Snow Maiden," and Filina in "Mignon."

"The Russian opera, I love it, splendid," and the recent bride accentuated the words with a tap of her finger, as she explained, during the intermission, that she will come to the Russian opera every night this week. "Yes, indeed."

CANCELS WALSKA DATE.
Sloux City, Ia., March 2.—[Special.]—Ganna Walska will not sing in Sloux City. Due to adverse criticism by the local critics, her engagement here has been canceled by the Sloux City concert course, under whose auspices she was to have appeared here on March 5.

CURZON ATTACKS HARVEY NOTE ON CONSULAR ROW

U. S. Refuses to Reopen Newcastle Office.

BY JOHN STEELE.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)
(Copyright, 1923, By The Chicago Tribune.)
LONDON, March 2.—Marquis Curzon, foreign secretary, today replied to Ambassador Harvey's note announcing that because of the refusal of the British to withdraw their charges against the consul and vice consul, the United States had decided not to reopen the consulate at Newcastle.

Lord Curzon denies some of Mr. Harvey's statements, such as the British government was fully informed of the result of the investigation by United States consular officers. Lord Curzon says: "Such is not the case. A member of my department was informed verbally last October that such an investigation had been held, and the statement is made in your excellency's note of Nov. 9 last that two separate inquiries into the facts had been instituted by the United States government."

"His majesty's government, however, was not informed of the proceedings in the inquiries, nor shown the evidence submitted, although his majesty's government furnished its evidence in my note to your excellency on Aug. 28 last."

Cites Some United States History.
Lord Curzon denies the accuracy of Mr. Harvey's parallel with the case of the cancellation of the exequaturs of certain British consuls in America in 1856, and refers Mr. Harvey to the advice given by the President of the United States in 1815 by his legal adviser.

The situation now is that the consulate is definitely closed and the lease surrendered. Great inconvenience is being caused both British and American by the absence of a consulate at this busy port. Both governments insist they are right and both are strictly within their technical legal rights.

Sits British Business Men.

LONDON, March 2.—(By the Associated Press.)—The sale of the lease of the American consulate at Newcastle closed last summer when the British government cancelled the exequaturs of the consular officers, has created a determination among the business men there to force the issue with the government at London and demand action from the foreign office, instead of merely resting on the hope that the situation would work itself out in time. It is feared that extraordinary pressure is soon to be brought to bear by T. G. Adams, member of parliament from Newcastle, who himself is a prominent shipper and one of the heaviest losers through the diversion of all consular affairs to Hull.

Will Demand Full Evidence.
It is understood that Mr. Adams main line of attack will be to urge the government at least to comply with the United States government's request to submit the full evidence in support of the charges originally made against the consular officials. It is understood that the United States government does not consider the documents so far submitted to be evidence, since the only support to the charges consisted of unsigned affidavits.

As a result of the closing of the consulate at Newcastle the bunker coal business there has materially declined, the exports have dropped, and there have been large losses in the sale of steamship tickets.

Protests are being heard from British shippers in Newcastle because the British government will not bring its dispute with the United States over the Newcastle consulate to a close. The British government complained that the two American consuls at Newcastle were using unfair methods to get trade for American shipping. The American government found the charges false but recalled the consuls and allowed the lease of the office in Newcastle to lapse. This seriously affected British shipping at Newcastle, as it was now necessary to go to Hull and other ports for American vessels on cargo destined for America. As a result, trade has dropped greatly at Newcastle. The shippers are protesting that the British government's actions are hurting them more than the United States.

NORTH. PACIFIC AND G. NORTHERN O. K. BIG MERGER

Donnelly and Budd Show Benefits.

(BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.)
Washington, D. C., March 2.—(Special.)—Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific, and Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern, testifying today before the interstate commerce commission in the consolidation proceedings, strongly urged that the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy be permitted to consolidate and thus re-form an alliance established more than twenty years ago.

Mr. Budd practically served notice that any grouping which would not provide for consolidation of the three roads would be strenuously opposed. "Reasons for Merger."

"Speaking for the Great Northern, I feel it is my duty to point out that the consolidation statute is purely permissive and therefore proceeds on the theory that companies will not consolidate unless they find it to their ultimate interest to do so," he declared. "That being true, I am satisfied that the Great Northern company could not find it to its interest to promote any consolidation which would involve the loss of its interest in the Burlington and of the highly important relationships built up during the past."

Mr. Budd declared savings aggregating $10,000,000 annually would result from economies effected by the consolidation.

Backs Up Mr. Budd.

Mr. Donnelly, referring to the spirited contest between the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific for control of the Burlington, in the event the commission should decide in favor of separating the roads, said to remove any erroneous impression as to the position of the Northern Pacific toward the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific endorsed the position taken by Mr. Budd.

The hearings on the tentative consolidation plan of the commission will be resumed some time after March 15.

STATE BLAMES HUGH WILLIS FOR HERRIN MURDERS

Marion, Ill., March 2.—(By the Associated Press.)—Hugh Willis, state board member of the Illinois Mine Workers, was accused of having been the leader of a conspiracy that resulted in the slaying of twenty-two non-union workers by C. W. Middlekauff, assistant attorney general of Illinois, in his opening statement to the jury in the second Herrin riots trial today.

With Otis Clark, Oscar Howard, James Brown, Bert Grace and Phillip Ponanetta, Willis is charged with the murder of Antonio Mulkovich of Erie, Pa., who was pictured as a soldier returned from the war to become an armed guard at the mine of the Southern Illinois coal company.

Kerr Opens for Defense.
The opening statement for the defense was made by August W. Kerr, chief counsel of the Illinois Mine Workers, who declared that the prayer of the meek and lowly throughout the country is that this jury shall decide that the day has gone by when great corporations in their greed for profits can use gunmen in an effort to set up an industrial autocracy.

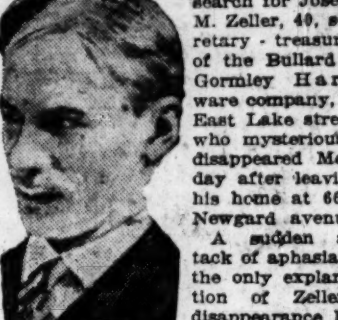

Mr. Middlekauff said that the prosecution would make no effort to justify Newcastle to hope. This seriously affected British shipping at Newcastle, as it was now necessary to go to Hull and other ports for American vessels on cargo destined for America. As a result, trade has dropped greatly at Newcastle. The shippers are protesting that the British government's actions are hurting them more than the United States.

Justifies Raising Funds.
The action of the Illinois Mine Workers in raising funds to defend the accused, and in paying witnesses who testified for the defense, was justified by Mr. Kerr who declared that through the Illinois Chamber of Commerce all the power and wealth of the state was arrayed against these men.

The Boy Scout's organization of the entire nation has been asked to engage in the search for Joseph M. Zeller, 44, secretary-treasurer of the Bullard & Gormley Hardware company, 54 East Lake street, who mysteriously disappeared Monday after leaving his home at 6620 Newland avenue.

JOSEPH M. ZELLER, secretary-treasurer of the Bullard & Gormley Hardware company, 54 East Lake street, who mysteriously disappeared Monday after leaving his home at 6620 Newland avenue.

A sudden attack of aphasia is the only explanation of Zeller's disappearance. His relatives and business associates can offer. A brother, Maurice Zeller, 535 South Dearborn street, is among those favoring this theory.

"My brother had been overworking and last Sunday he was restless and uneasy," said Mr. Zeller. "He had no domestic or business troubles. His bank account is untouched."

were the first to fall during the rioting. Mr. Kerr asserted that the defense would show that the real murders in this case were the men who brought into the country tons of instruments of death and warfare.

After the conclusion of the opening statements Judge D. T. Hartwell announced an adjournment until Monday when the prosecution will begin the introduction of its evidence.

J. S. McINERNEY DEATH VERDICT STIRS RELATIVES

Grand jury investigation of the death on Thursday of James S. McInerney, former clerk of the Appellate court, may be demanded by relatives as a result of failure of a coroner's jury to fix responsibility for the fatal accident. Mr. McInerney died from injuries received when he was struck by a taxicab driven by Alfred Garfield, 331 Stanley terrace.

Garfield's story of the accident was denied yesterday by witnesses. Garfield said Mr. McInerney attempted to cross Madison street from the north to the south side at Lamon avenue, stepping directly in front of his cab from behind a street car.

James Rose, 3535 Lexington street, an eyewitness, said McInerney did not pass behind a street car, but had stepped off the curb. He added no vehicles intercepted Garfield's view.

PEACE OR WAR IN TURKEY UP TO ALLIES—KEMAL

Fully Prepared to Fight,
He Tells Assembly.

BY LARRY RUE.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)
(Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.)
ANGORA, March 2.—(Tribune Radio.)—The new year has commenced and the government does not know whether it will be a year of war or peace. Mustafa Kemal Pasha said in his speech to the Turkish national assembly. "If war comes we are fully prepared. On the other hand, we are not encroaching on any other country and we are merely asking the right to live, which, if the allies grant it, means peace."

This, as well as the declaration that the separation of the caliphate and the government was the greatest moral guarantee against foreign intrigues, was applauded enthusiastically. Although Kemal did not go into the merits of the Lausanne treaty, he is known to coincide with the general opinion here that the proposed economic clauses will be a form of slavery. The former temporal powers of the caliph are held responsible for the allied economic leverage against Turkey. The assembly resumed debate on the treaty today.

Crowd Hears Kemal.
More than an hour before Kemal's speech was scheduled the ministers filled the two tiny galleries, seating less than fifty each, and half an hour before the assembly was called to order every inch of standing room was taken.

Among the early arrivals was the French delegation, which was seated in the first row on a wooden bench, behind which were seated the bolsheviks, who displayed Kemal's vigorous campaign for women's equality. Kemal's wife was the only Turk woman present for a time. She came with her husband and occupied a seat in the gallery beside the French. She later was joined by Mrs. Imbrie, wife of the United States agent, and Mrs. Ahnoff, wife of the bolshevik ambassador.

The galleries like the assembly were characterized by the diversity of people, those in the latest European attire rubbing elbows with Hajas robes and less elegant dress. Like a U. S. Congressman, Kemal entered on schedule time and the noise and conversation hushed immediately. He mounted the miniature rostrum and secured the speaker's chair. He was attired in a morning coat and with the exception of his khalpe, he easily might have been taken for an American congressman. He mopped his forehead a couple of times and drank two glasses of water. The house was called to order, Kemal pushed his chair back, quietly asserted his sheets of paper and calmly read his address in a monotonous, impersonal tone. Shortly after he commenced a deputy enthusiastically started clapping, but he was hushed into abject silence as Kemal continued to read, seemingly undisturbed.

Ready on Southern Frontiers.
Anyone working a change in the present status of the caliphate will be regarded as a traitor, he said, because it would endanger Turkish sovereignty. Regarding military preparations, Kemal emphasized that the southern defenses—obviously those bordering French Syria and Mosul—had been especially fortified. Again he stated that unless the allies change their "unjust aims," war is inevitable. Mentioning the southern frontiers was significant, reflecting the Turk sentiment that France is responsible for many of the Lausanne jokers.

Greece Hates Prisoner Exchanges.
ATHENS, March 2.—The Greek cabinet announces that in view of the continued deportation of Pontus Greeks by the Kemalists, it has decided to suspend the exchange of Turkish civilian prisoners which was to have started yesterday. This action was taken after H. C. Jacquith, director of the near east relief at Constantinople, had informed the ministers that 25,000 Greek refugees were concentrated in Constantinople, being crowded in inadequate barracks. Mr. Jacquith said the refugees were suffering from disease to such an extent that the situation was entirely beyond the control of the group. 4 KILLED BY GAS, 9 OVERCOME, IN DAY OF MISHAPS

Four persons are dead and nine others are in optical condition at hospitals as result of a series of gas accidents yesterday.

Mrs. Pauline Johnson, 60, the first victim, was found unconscious in the bathroom of her home at 2306 North Lawndale avenue. She apparently had failed to light the gas jet of a water heater after turning it on. She died. Almost the same circumstances resulted in the death of Martin B. Riley Jr., son of a police sergeant, and student at Hyde Park high school, who was found dead in a bathroom at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Henry Galvin, 2430 North Mason street. The body of Ole Nelson, 35, was found in a bedroom over the saloon of Joseph Taylor, 3801 West Grand avenue, where he was employed. Martin McElaine, 33 years old, 1325 Vine street, was found dead in bed last night, a burner on the gas stove open. John Kolin, 20, 4325 West 16th street, one of the nine overcome, had come home intoxicated and had gone to sleep in a chair while his pot of coffee boiled over, extinguishing a gas jet. Mrs. Saludes declared on the witness stand that she had never heard of any law against murder and was not interested in the matter. "You know today that it was wrong to kill Martelliere?" she was asked. "I do not know that I killed him," she answered.

TRIED SUICIDE 5 TIMES AFTER SHE KILLED BROKER

New York, March 2.—Five attempts made by Mrs. Paulette Saludes to commit suicide after she had shot Oscar Martelliere in his brokerage office here last October were described today at her trial for murder.

Three of the four witnesses said she had appeared to them irrational. The fourth, Detective Stephen M. Dumphy, who admitted he was assigned to the district attorney's office and had been working on the case, said he thought her sane.

These witnesses were called after Mrs. Saludes, her cross-examination over, had left the stand, swooning. After they had been heard the case was adjourned until Monday afternoon. Mrs. Saludes declared on the witness stand that she had never heard of any law against murder and was not interested in the matter. "You know today that it was wrong to kill Martelliere?" she was asked. "I do not know that I killed him," she answered.

HOUSING EXPERT BLAMES GREED FOR RISING RENT

Asks Public Spirited to Build Cheap Flats.

Chicago is in the midst of its greatest building boom, but the promised reduction in rents has not materialized. In fact there is every indication that instead of a decrease there will be a material increase in rents, particularly in the lower priced apartments. In this class, apartments now renting for $45 to $50 a month, the increase will be a uniform one of from $7.50 to $15.

Yesterday while one Tribune representative was tramping the streets of the west side trying to rent a reasonable priced apartment, another visited real estate men, contractors, city officials, and the office of the Citizens Committee to Enforce the Landis Award in search of the reason why the working man should be hit by a rent increase.

Analyze Rent Paradox.

All agreed that the increase was not justified; all agreed as to the reason, but only one, the Landis award officials, had a solution to offer. The reason for the increase is the fact that practically all the apartment buildings constructed have been of the type which rent for $15 or more. This has given no relief for the shortage in low priced flats.

The solution offered by F. W. Armstrong, general manager of the Citizens Committee, is the construction of apartment structures similar to those built by the Stokes fund in New York. A similar attitude was taken last night by the Building Trades council in its separate study of the question.

"While the Getting's Good."
"There is no justification for the increases being reported in the $50, $60 a month class of apartment," said Mr. Armstrong, "except the desire to get the pound of flesh while the getting is good."

"Prompt relief from this situation could be obtained if a group of philanthropists interested in the housing situation would finance a number of apartment buildings in design to those built by the Stokes fund in New York City. These apartments are modern, have all conveniences, and rent for an average of $9 a room per month. At this low figure they still show a net return of 6 per cent on the investment."

"Barring this, the man on the small salary will either have to buy a home on easy terms or await the slower workings of the law of supply and demand."

"We contend that if the tenants in the more expensive apartments where there are so many vacancies, will fight for a rent reduction and move if they don't get it, they will win."

The trades council discussion resulted in a decision to urge contractors and builders to construct less expensive buildings. "There are many vacant flats and apartments in the higher priced buildings," said Edward Ryan, president of the council, "but the little fellow, the man who can only afford to pay $45 or $50 a month, can't find any place to live. They can't stand rent increases."

LORIMER CRASH SENDS ANOTHER TO BANKRUPTCY

A voluntary petition in bankruptcy filed yesterday by David I. Felsenthal and his wife, Mrs. Lillian M. Felsenthal, 4500 North Racine avenue, listing liabilities of $83,474, was said by Felsenthal last night to be an echo of the crash of William Lorimer's La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank in 1914.

"I was a stockholder," he said. "Judgments were obtained against me in twice the amount of my stock. It's about time I was cleaning that up."

Soon after the bank failure Felsenthal was tried and twice acquitted on a charge of arson, his warehouse at 3024 South Morgan street having been destroyed by fire.

MAN HELD ON GIRL'S CHARGES.
Joseph Pasquelli, 1701 Algonquin street, yesterday was held to the grand jury in bonds of $10,000 on serious charges brought by his adopted daughter, Mildred Bara, 13 years old.

SERGE YODELS LOVE LYRICS TO DARLING ISADORA

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)
(Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.)
BERLIN, March 2.—Distance lends enchantment to view, and Serge Yesenin again sings love lyrics of Isadora.

The temperamental Russian poet visited THE TRIBUNE office today to complain that he did not remember saying anything about his new wife and that he loved Isadora better than anything in the whole world, and that he wanted to fight a duel with THE TRIBUNE correspondent, and that anyway it is all wrong, because Isadora is coming to Berlin. He is living with his son.

When THE TRIBUNE correspondent suggested that perhaps Serge was under the influence of hooch he replied that he was very tired from his trip.

Isadora Wires Complaint.

Serge's visit was prompted by a telegram from Isadora justly complaining against Yesenin's tirade. Serge's memory of the evening following his arrival from Paris is exceedingly defective. He recalls his arrival at the station, a short taxi ride and his conversation with THE TRIBUNE, but the details are all vague and hazy. The tired genius often has a lapse of memory.

At any rate, Serge asks THE TRIBUNE to publish the following open letter: "I am only separated temporarily from Isadora Duncan in order to arrange my business affairs in Berlin. "2. I love Isadora, Duncan better than anything in the world. "3. There is no other woman in my life. On my trip my new wife did not accompany me, but her maid came with me in order to help me because orientation is very hard in Europe for me."

Greeting America, Too.

He added a greeting for America. "In America I did not dare say I was a bolshevik," he volunteered, "but here I am free to speak."

He paused as if the fate of empires hung upon his words.

"I am a bolshevik."

Yesenin explained that he will remain in Berlin to publish a newspaper.

WHY GERMAN'S DIDN'T PROTEST

AT WAR HORRORS.

Milwaukee, Feb. 23.—Harold O. Johnson propounds a series of questions in four issues under date of February 23 that I wish to answer, because Mr. Johnson is one of the few radical batters who at least has the courage to sign his own name. I write as a mere American.

Mr. Johnson asks: "Did you in a like manner protest the invasion of Belgium,

France, Luxembourg and Serbia in 1914?"

No, because that was an act of war brought on by France, Serbia and Belgium themselves. Glibbe has told all about the secret treaties between Belgium and France, and the Serbian government backed its assassins. So why protest?"

"Did you in a like manner protest the sinking of the Lusitania?" No, that too, was an act of war. The Lusitania carried munitions for France and France therefore is more responsible for its sinking than is Germany.

"Did you in a like manner protest the use of gas?" No, because death by gas is no more cruel than death by famine, which the allies decreed for the defenseless babies of Germany.

"Did you protest the destruction of the priceless art treasures and churches of France and Belgium?" No, there is no thing priceless except truth and life, and other nations in the world have been untruthful and destructive of human life

as France—the militaristic, imperialistic throwback of savagery.

A JAPANESE EXCEPTION TO WAR

PRECEDENT.

Toledo, O., Feb. 23.—The editorial of

There an End to War?" was exceedingly interesting to me; but as I cannot pass statement that war with Japan is not

Since the dawn of the history war has been fought for two main reasons: First, it is the human instinct to fight and necessity of the conquest of the neigh-

BY PARKE BROWN.

"Keep your eye on the ball" is a favorite expression with football coaches and golf professionals. But the politicians intend to borrow it for the majority campaign.

So far as can be learned there is a desire among both Republican and Democratic leaders to keep the issue of the election clearly defined. As they see it, the issue is the person-ality of the candidate and the sort of city administration that might be expected from him.

But within three days of the primary that determined which candidate must meet on April 3 that kind of issue was beclouded with almost every imaginable form of propaganda. This form of poison gas has appeared in such clouds that there is a general suspicion that the approaching campaign will be a warfare of propaganda instead of an effort to get the calm judgment of the voters upon the selection of a new manager for their municipal business.

Stir Racial Feeling.

Chance conversations on the downtown streets since Tuesday have shown that there apparently has been begun a systematic effort to stir up both religious and racial feeling throughout the city. Exaggerated yarns of what the candidate will do in the way of cabinet appointments or the other odds and ends will do by reference to the public schools have been carried broadcast.

It is understood, largely from the one speech delivered by George E. Brennan, Democratic chief, that the chief argument to be made in William E. Dever's favor will be his experience. And the Republicans are expecting to play upon the fact that Arthur C. Lueder is a young business man of proved administrative ability.

And in the meantime they face the task of checking armies of volunteer propagandists that they believe will not only interfere with a fair election but arouse bitter hatreds in the community.

John Backs Dever.

Except for organization technicians the both headquarters were quiet yesterday, the one ripple on the surface being caused by the expected announcement from Harold L. Ickes that he is for Dever. Ickes is another former Bull Moose like Prof. Charles E. Merriam, who endorsed Dever twenty-four hours earlier, and the indications are that there is a plan afoot to arouse the old "insurgent" Republican element against the organization.

"He is the best candidate any party has offered for this service in many years," was Ickes' tribute to Judge Dever. "I have known him for upward of twenty-five years. I have followed his public career closely."

"I have found men who differed with him on questions of principle, but I have yet to find any one who doubted his sincerity of mind, his integrity of character, his fundamental honesty, and his single hearted desire to do what is right and in the public interest. Above all, Judge Dever is new, as he always has been, his own political boss."

behaved like a Hun. I have found him walking in his pajamas in the street, walking in his sleep. It is not curious. That is how it happened."

Didn't Know About It.

Finally the wife convinced her husband that her story was true and he wrote her: "Living with a mad husband must have been awful. I can only say that I didn't know anything about it, and if you had only told me I would have padlocked myself to the bed rather than to have had such a thing happen."

Mr. Russell, who was the first witness, said he had never consummated the marriage "in the full sense of the word."

"When I remonstrated with her about not even allowing me to kiss or touch her she said if I wanted that sort of thing to go and buy it in Piccadilly."

Mr. Russell denied his wife's story of Hunnish scenes, saying he had never forced his way into her room and that he had never forced his attentions on his wife.

NEW ALDERMEN BEREFT OF HOPE FOR MARCH PAY

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

No alderman elect will get on the pay roll now for an extra month's pay of $416, as some had hoped.

Frank X. Busch, attorney for the election commissioners, pointed out yesterday that section 13 of the nonpartisan election act specifically prohibits issuance of certificates of election until after April 3, and it was his opinion that this certificate is necessary to qualify for office.

Mr. Busch also said that contests may be filed immediately following the proclamation of the results of the election. County Judge Jarecki plans to issue that proclamation Monday. Friends of Ald. John A. Richert continued yesterday to urge him to contest the election of Ald. Timothy A. Hogan.

Richert May Contest.

The canvass of votes shows that Hogan was elected. Hogan's majority over his two opponents was $3 votes, but his majority of all the votes cast for alderman was 42. County Judge Jarecki and Attorney Busch said that the latter was the legally prescribed method of reckoning the majority, although against previous practice.

Whether it will be filed with the city council or with the County court, or both, remains to be determined. Attorney Busch said yesterday the law on the subject is not clear. It is anticipated that it would take only a few days to recount the votes, whether the election commissioners or the city council is in charge of the work.

Second Election Due.

Interest in the canvass of the aldermanic votes yesterday centered in the Fortieth ward, where a second election must be held. Ald. Christ A. Jensen was shown to have been the high man with 3,664 votes. The votes for the next three are as follows: Sophus E. Richards, 1,996; Isaac Newton Chelley, 1,877; and Alexander F. Falk, 1,933. A contest, with a recount of the votes, is expected for the privilege of running against Jensen April 3.

MULCAHY READY TO USE FISTS AT KLAN QUIZ

"Now that the rejected aldermanic candidates are present, let us proceed," said Attorney Charles G. Palmer, counsel for William H. Green, fireman and alleged klanman, before the city civil service commission yesterday when Green's case was called for trial.

"Come out in the hall. I'll deal with you there," shouted Ald. Mulcahy, whose committee brought the charges against Green.

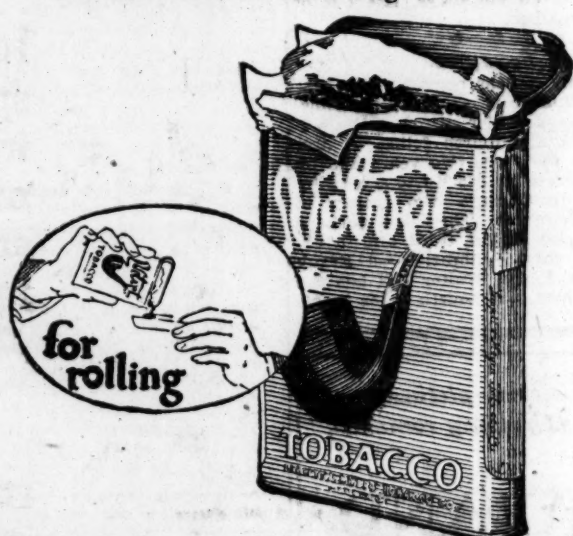

Mulcahy, who was defeated last Tuesday, waved his hands menacingly. Attorney Palmer asked the commission to "preserve decorum in this room," and the incident was closed.

After a statement by Attorney Paul Jarecki and Attorney Busch, grand counsel for the klan, the commission continued the hearing until March 16.

It now appears that of the five aldermen who took a prominent part in the klan investigation, three have been defeated, and one must make a second race. Those defeated were Mulcahy, S. O. Shaffer, and S. S. Walkowiak. Ald. Garner, who defended Green, must run again April 3. The fifth alderman, L. B. Anderson, was reflected on Tuesday.

RELIGIOUS BOOK WEEK

By Fanny Butcher.

Next week will be religious book week. I wish that the famous Pagan "Life of Christ" had been published. It is coming in a few weeks, to win, certainly, the brilliant praise which it gained in the original. They say, who have read it, that it is the most human biography imaginable and a great piece of literary art. But perhaps it is just as well that it is not, or the larger significance of religious book week might have been confused with the literal celebration of it. The religious book week committee and the churches of the United States have chosen as a slogan for the week, "Good books build character," and throughout the country the consideration of fundamentally sound and fine books of every type, not only religious books, will be taken up in the churches and clubs.

GOOD BOOKS CHILD CHARACTER

Like the elephant's child, I have a most insatiable curiosity, only mine is about another person's favorite books. I have never sniffed much into the affairs of others. I'm always the next to the last person to hear a bit of gossip—gratifying that the person I'm curious is the last. But I have an honest and all-compelling eagerness to know what books certain types of persons read and like. And I believe that it's an eagerness that is shared by every one who loves books. And that's why, for religious book week, I asked representative religious leaders in the city to tell me what books had meant most in their lives. I thought that in that way we might have a real celebration of books that had built character.

I asked them what books had meant most to them, not necessarily religious books, but just books. I said exclusive of the Bible, because the Bible was obviously head the list of each person, and I suggested five books as a good round number, and no harder to choose than twenty-five or a hundred, probably. If you are as interested in the replies as I am you will consider our religious book week symposium a pleasant success.

Rev. George Craig Stewart.

Dr. George Craig Stewart of St. Luke's parish, Evanston, says: "The following books, I may fairly say, have meant most to me in my life: 'Newman's "Apologia pro vita sua"; "Pater's "Marius the Epicurean"; "Engel's "Christian Mysticism"; "Henry Adams' "Mount St. Michel and Chartres"; "G. K. Chesterton's "Ballad of the White Horse"; "It is only fair to add, I think, that each of these books is immeasurably strengthened in its effect upon me by the product of the same author and which have, no doubt, contributed not a little to the confirmation of each particular appraisal."

Dr. Van Ogden Vogt.

The Rev. Van Ogden Vogt of the Wellington Avenue Congregational church, and author last year of that really stimulating book, "Religion and Art," published by the Yale University Press, said that he was brought up a Methodist and still is one, and that he still has a penchant for Tennyson and Browning and Shakespeare and the other reactionaries, but most of all for Matthew Arnold's poems. He remembers Stanley's "Darkest Africa" and "Treasure Island" and "Huckleberry Finn" with the utmost joy. His favorite novels are Tolstoy's "Anna Karenina" and the Dumas romances. He has a few intimates among books which he feels aren't as pretentious (and most of them aren't enough). He thinks that Francis Thompson's "Essays on Shelley" is a truly beautiful piece of writing. Henri Bergson's "Creative Evolution" means much to him, as have also William Vaughn Moody's poems and the plays of John Galsworthy and "Ascending Effort," by George Bourne. William Graham Sumner's "Folk Ways" is a stimulus to him in the scientific field, and is

CONFESSIONS

Eunice Tietjens, who is now Mrs. Lloyd Head, and whose "Body and Soul" is one of the volumes of poetry that every one who knows knows, made this confession when I asked her what book she would rather have written than any other. I might confess, since we're all in a confessing mood today, that I, too, would almost rather have written "Alice" than anything I can think of.

Dear Fanny Butcher: Since you ask not for the book I consider best but for my secret predilection, I shall have to answer "Alice in Wonderland." "Mutual Aid," by Kropotkin, and the works of Browning and Shakespeare.

Dr. Dunn, Catholic Chancellor.

Dr. Dunn, chancellor of the Catholic Church of Chicago, gave as the books which had meant most in his life, "The Imitation of Christ," by Thomas à Kempis, the works of St. Thomas, the works of Bourdaloue, the writings of Cardinal Newman, and the writings of Cardinal Wiseman.

Rabbi Joseph Stolz.

Rabbi Joseph Stolz listed the books which "have meant most to me in the development of my vocation." Gratz's "History of the Jews," Lecky's "History of European Morals," Spencer's "Data of Ethics," Beecher's "Yale Lectures," and "American Patriotism," a collection of orations by American statesmen.

Dr. Charles W. Gilkey.

Dr. Charles W. Gilkey, minister of the Hyde Park Baptist church, said: "A list of five books which during the last year I would put first among those I have personally read: 'Creative Chemistry,' by E. S. Stenhouse; 'Disciplines of Liberty,' by W. L. Perry; 'Christianity and Progress,' by Harry Emerson Fosdick; 'What Is There in Religion?' by Henry S. Coffin, and 'Our Social Heritage,' by Graham Wallas."

Dr. L. Ward Brigham.

Dr. L. Ward Brigham, minister of St. Paul's on the Midway (Universalist), says: "The names of five books that have meant most to me, not inclusive of religious books, are: 'Our Mutual Friend,' by Dickens; a good story with a plot, by a master hand; 'The Phenomena,' by Hudson; a lucid and sound book for the beginner in all mental knowledge; 'Histories,' by Fiske. These prepare one in democracy and show how histories should be written as the expression of the people."

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," by Stevenson. The ego's eternal struggle is here made graphic, preparing one for countless personal and social experiences through life.

"An Outline of History," by Wells. One rises above the confusion and conflict of the present into sympathy with the universe and a quickening perception of the divine purposes in life.

"Many Marriages."

Speaking of books that build character, I should like right here and now to say my say about Sherwood Anderson's new novel, "Many Marriages." Since his enormous European success—with "Winesburg, Ohio," and "The Triumph of an Egg," especially—and since the Dial prize award last year and since the vociferous words of praise that have been echoing at every mention of his name, many readers will think that because "Many Marriages" is written by Sherwood Anderson it must be a great artistic triumph. I haven't the slightest doubt that some of them are going to think it's the greatest piece of creative literature written in our decade. There is always one who does that sort of thing—ballyhoo for badness, pounds the tomtom, and does a literary war dance because something is "real."

"Many Marriages" is "real" all right—but this is the opinion of critics and readers all over the country. Zane Grey "fans," men and women who read everything he writes say that he has surpassed himself in his new book, a powerful story of spiritual and physical adventure in the Wasteland of the great Southwest.

BOOK NEWS from LONDON

BY SIDNEY DARK.

(Editor of John of London's Weekly.)

Although Mr. Lloyd George's promised war book may have to wait for completion while he is busy with new paper articles, there are likely this year to be many additions to the already swollen library of war literature. I am told that Winston Churchill has finished his book, "The World War," and that it will be published in the early spring.

Meanwhile, I have received from Stuttgart a volume of reminiscences written by Von Moltke, who was chief of the German general staff when the war began. I should rather doubt whether this book will be considered of sufficient importance for translation into English. Its main interest lies in the incidental picture of the Kaiser. The nuptial, or might add, is about his flight of love as it is about his breaking the news to his wife and child. That he does in a way which would probably be wholly inconceivable to the mind of a manufacturer of washing machines in a little town, which even a leader of fictional Greenwich Village society would probably fail at. Mr. Anderson makes what he seems to be an unconscious art expression, "a picture of a nude, not as Mr. Degas made it, descending a staircase, but posturing before a picture of the Virgin. The nude, one might add, is not of Mr. Degas' indeterminate sex. It is none other than the washing machine manufacturer himself."

There may be, among the cases of psychopathic specialists men who would think that the way to quicken their daughters to the meaning of love is to do what John Webster did, but not men in any normal society would certainly be locked up. Most of the book is concerned with the disgusting situation of a father, thus expounding life to his 17 year old daughter going out in something of detail the infelicities of his married life, beginning with the time when he and his wife met accidentally and also unclothed.

Even the most modern of the modernists are going to find "Many Marriages" a little too much for them, I'm afraid. At least, I'm glad, because this book shows to what lengths the so-called modernists can go. It is badly written. It has few claims to distinction in a literary way. It is revolting without being in any sense beautiful—as Gerhart Hauptmann's "Phantom," for instance, was beautiful. I have never in my life read a book so nauseating at times, and at the same time so almost comic. It makes one think that Sherwood Anderson is, as the American slangists might have it, giving us the raspberry.

It is rather ironic that "Many Marriages" should have come just now, when we are all considering the proposition that good books make character. It is, to my simple taste, the perfect antithesis of a good book.

Literary Headquarters

The Largest Bookstore in the World, is naturally a place of great interest to anyone who hears of the book world; they hear of the popularity of their own works. Incognito, they hear amusing comments from purchasers; or they are discovered, and induced by admirers to autograph copies.

Of late, among those visitors from overseas have been Sir Conan Doyle, Sir Oliver Lodge, Hugh Walpole, Cosmo Hamilton, Margot Asquith, W. L. George. Of our own notables there have been Joseph Hergesheimer, Hendrik Van Loon, Sherwood Anderson, George Barr McCutcheon, Edgar A. Guest, Hamlin Garland and Thomas Nelson Page. From the dramatic profession there are recorded E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe, Raymond Hitchcock and Frank Bacon.

These are but a fraction of the list. Scarcely, indeed, does an author or person of note visit Chicago without stopping in at McClurg's.

GLADIOLA MURPHY

By RUTH SAWYER

In Gladiola Murphy were mixed the blood of an Irish patriot, a Penobscot Princess and a great sea captain. The promise of so exotic an ancestry is carried out in the person of one of the most striking and appealing heroines in recent fiction. At eleven, Gladiola, a profane and ragged wif, with a love of beauty the dominant urge in her topsy-turvy soul, casts off all ties with the house of Murphy. Her extraordinary story, told with humor and intimate feeling, forms one of the best novels from the pen of an author whose books have for years enjoyed a wide and deserved popularity.

the character and the difficulties of the man who ruled France from 1848 to 1870. Part of this essential knowledge can be gained from Mr. Simpson's study of Louis Napoleon's life.

He was all for "self-determination." He really meant what he said when he declared that "the empire is peace."

Ray Stannard Baker's "Woodrow Wilson and World Settlement" has been published here and has naturally been reviewed at length. On the whole, English critics agree that Stannard Baker has not told the world much that it did not know before. I met Stannard Baker almost every day during the Paris peace conference, and he was certainly invariably courteous and helpful to English newspaper men, even to those of whom I was one, who thought it their duty to deal faithfully with Mr. Wilson and his policy. He has been criticized here for printing in his book some of the confidential papers which Mr. Wilson "plunked" into his Paris trunk and afterward handed over for the purpose of this book. Probably Mr. Wilson knew—Stannard Baker certainly did—that so many copies of these confidential documents were circulated that the special correspondent who did not get hold of a copy of every one of them certainly did not know his business. The Morning Post, which stands for the old diplomacy, as well as for everything else that is old, headed its review of Stannard Baker's volume with the words "Bunk and Super Bunk."

Henry Van Dyke says of Arthur Train's novel HIS CHILDREN'S CHILDREN

"Here is a book which does for New York of our own day what Thackeray's 'Vanity Fair' did for London of a hundred years ago. It lifts the curtain and shows us in behind the scenes."

GLADIOLA MURPHY

By RUTH SAWYER

In Gladiola Murphy were mixed the blood of an Irish patriot, a Penobscot Princess and a great sea captain. The promise of so exotic an ancestry is carried out in the person of one of the most striking and appealing heroines in recent fiction. At eleven, Gladiola, a profane and ragged wif, with a love of beauty the dominant urge in her topsy-turvy soul, casts off all ties with the house of Murphy. Her extraordinary story, told with humor and intimate feeling, forms one of the best novels from the pen of an author whose books have for years enjoyed a wide and deserved popularity.

SENATE TO SIFT CHARGES OF RAW DEAL FOR HEROES

Veterans' Bureau Will Be Subject of Inquiry.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)
Washington, D. C., March 2.—(Special.)—Charges of waste, extravagance, and mismanagement in the veterans' bureau will be the subject of a thorough inquiry, beginning next week.

The senate today adopted a resolution creating a special committee of three members and empowered it with authority to sit during the adjournment of congress.

The committee will be headed by Senator Reed (Rep., Pa.), who won the distinguished service medal as a major in the 31st field artillery in the world war. The other members of the committee will be Senator Walsh (Dem., Mass.), a member of the special committee which investigated the treatment of disabled ex-service men last year, and Senator Oddie (Rep., Nev.).

Will Work with Hines.
Senator Reed said the policy of the committee would be to work in harmony with Gen. Hines, recently appointed by President Harding to head the veterans' bureau, "as far as it is possible and consistent with a thorough investigation of the serious charges that have been made against the operation of the veterans' bureau."

The senate directed the committee "to investigate the leases and contracts executed by the veterans' bureau or the treasury department, for vocational schools and hospitals, and for the purchase, rentals, and sales of real estate and supplies used or to be used, directly or indirectly, by the veterans' bureau, and the matters and conditions in the premises set forth, and to report their findings, together with recommendations for the improvement of such conditions, to the next regular session of congress."

Great Suffering Results.
It is set forth in the preamble that complaints are being made against alleged delay by the bureau in the adjustment of claims for the relief of disabled veterans, and that there has been great and needless delay in the construction of hospitals and in providing proper hospitalization, as a result of which unnecessary suffering exists.

ACCOUNTING IN CHECKER CAB CO. AFFAIRS SOUGHT

Stock manipulations to "freeze out" certain shareholders are charged against officials of the Checker Cab Manufacturing company in a bill for an accounting filed in the Superior court yesterday by A. Lomborg, 1831 South Avers avenue.

Lomborg claims ownership of 48 per cent of the common stock of the Federal Auto Building company, the assets of which were recently taken over by the Checker Cab Manufacturing company, the latter now a $1,000,000 Delaware corporation. In the reorganization, Lomborg declares that he was refused a certificate evidencing his interest in the company, valued, according to his bill, at $112,500.

The officers of the Checker Cab Manufacturing company now propose, he charges, to transfer the corporation's assets to a new company to be known as the Checker Cab Manufacturing Company of New Jersey, without providing for his inclusion as a stockholder.

RURAL CREDITS SPEEDED ALONG BY CONFEREES

Agreement Prepares Passage Today.

Washington, D. C., March 2.—(Special.)—Conferees of the senate and house on the rural credits bill reached a unanimous agreement tonight and both houses are expected to approve the conference report tomorrow.

The measure, as agreed upon, contains the vital features of all three bills which were combined in the house draft—the Lenroot-Anderson, Capper, and Strong bills.

The conferees restored the agricultural credit corporations of the Capper bill to the jurisdiction of the controller of the currency, as provided in the senate measure.

Leave Interest to States.
The chief controversy centered on a limitation on interest rates to be charged by the agricultural credit corporation to borrowers. The house bill limited interest rates to 1 1/2 per cent in excess of the rate of discount of the intermediate credit bank of the district.

The conferees eliminated the house limitation after a lengthy discussion, taking the position that interest rates should be regulated by state law.

The capital to be furnished by the government for the twelve intermediate banks to be attached to the present land banks, as provided by the Lenroot bill, is limited to $5,000,000 for each bank, or a total of $60,000,000, as specified in the house bill.

Change Corporate Names.
The conferees decided on slightly different names for the privately financed corporations of the Capper bill and the government banks of the Lenroot bill. The former are designated as National Agricultural Credit corporations, while the latter are known as Federal Intermediate banks.

Maximum loans on land mortgages by land banks to one individual are increased from $10,000 to $25,000, with a proviso that borrowers seeking $10,000 or less shall be given preference.

The war finance corporation is to be extended for nine months from June 30, 1923, as provided in the senate bill.

"KING" BENJAMIN LIKE RASPUTIN, WITNESS AVERS

Benton Harbor, Mich., March 2.—(Special.)—Dever Couch, former member of the House of David, whose wife was one of the Israelite colony, said today that "King" Benjamin Purnell, high priest of the sect, is deceiving his people just as the monk, Rasputin, deceived the Russian court.

Couch's wife was one of the girls, according to his statement, who with about twenty others, was hustled from the colony by stealth a few years ago, to a lonely island in Lake Michigan to await passing of a state investigation.

At High Island twenty-four girls masqueraded as boys, wearing masculine attire and caps, in case some one should land at the island and detect them, Couch said.

Stayed Faithful Eleven Years.
Couch, who left the colony a short time ago with his "selected" wife, for eleven years was an Israelite, and his parents still are members of the sect. On their return to the colony the girls were married to men selected for them by Benjamin and Mary, Couch said.

With much reluctance Couch told of the peculiarities of the Israelites. "We fellows don't have much to say about when we shall or shall not marry," he said. "It's all planned out by Benjamin and Mary. If there are certain girls in the colony who have to be married the men are called up and told to go through the marriage ceremony."

Girls Helpless Dupes.
Deceived, deceived, and beguiled into false opinions of the House of David and the world, girls are veritable tools in the hands of the "king" and his counselors, said Couch. "I heard the girls told that the world was no place for them, that they couldn't make their own living, and that they would starve out in the world," he declared.

SWEDES SWARM TO U. S. AS STRIKE SHUTS FACTORIES

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)
STOCKHOLM, March 2.—(Tribune Radio.)—A serious situation exists in Sweden because of a new big emigration movement to America. The movement is a result of the strikes and lockouts affecting 65,000 workers, crippling Swedish wood pulp production and largely affecting sawmills, iron works, and building trades.

The strikes began in the wood pulp industry, where the workers demanded a 30 per cent increase in wages. The owners offered only a fraction, and the refusal of both sides to accept a compromise led to a lockout now affecting 17,000 men. Reliable authorities state that in addition the following have been locked out: Saw mills, 24,000; iron works, 20,000, and building construction, 4,000, totaling 65,000.

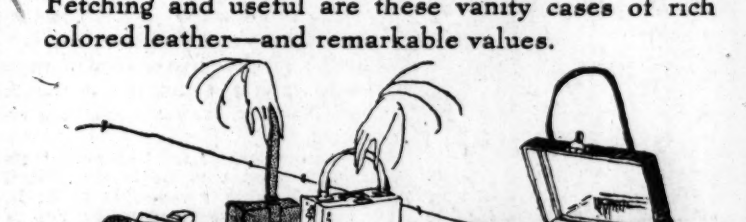

5,000 Seek Passage.
Two-thirds of the Swedish wood pulp production, which is largely exported, is stopped today and small factories, as well as other business depending on that trade, have been hurt. This fact, coupled with reports of prosperity in America, is now producing the largest emigration rush on record. The American consular offices at Stockholm, Gothenburg, and Malmö are swamped with applicants seeking visas. There are as many as sixty a day at Stockholm. It is estimated that 5,000 persons applied for passports during January and February.

Of Best Type.
The American consul here states that the new immigrants are of the best type he has ever seen. Many come to the office in fur coats and are better dressed than most persons in the streets of Chicago. Some even have their passport pictures taken in evening clothes.

Numerous Aland Islanders are going to the western states.

SYNOPSIS.

John Corbry is devoted to Sylvia, his second wife, and their young son. He is one of the great financiers, and just after his appointment to the cabinet his first wife, Katherine, whom he had divorced because of her unfaithfulness, threatens to reopen their divorce case on a technicality unless he returns to live with her as his husband. He goes back to the law in order to avoid staining Sylvia's honor and his son's name, and to stiffen Sylvia's back to the blow by arousing her pride, pretends he has been lured away by the other woman. He disappears.

Carfax, Sylvia's guardian, announces that Corbry is ill. After a month Corbry's absence creates a slight panic in the financial world. There is a run on an important bank, and out of curiosity Corbry goes to the scene. He has changed his appearance completely, but Carfax sees and accuses him. He denies that he is Corbry. Carfax apologizes, but appeals to him as a patriot to take Corbry's place to avert a great financial crisis. Corbry consents. Sylvia agrees to the arrangement and, although she knows he is her husband, she will not permit him to explain.

Katherine, who is evidently being coached in her part, objects to his double role of Corbry in town and briefly at Belling and renews her threats. John insists on carrying out his agreement with Sylvia and Carfax. He discovers that Deagle, head of the woolen industry and a power in politics, is the man who has incited Katherine to take action against him. A public scandal is threatened, but John and Sylvia agree to face it rather than have him resign before his work is finished. Sylvia bravely sets herself the task of unraveling the mystery surrounding John's actions. Reason, the detective, and Baylis, the solicitor, help her. They discover that the real J. W. Brierly had impersonated Lord Henry Graunham eleven years ago.

INSTALLMENT LXXXIV.
SYLVIA CAPITULATES.

"No. Wait." His voice was like ice. "I once held her in my arms. I was going to kiss her. I would have kissed her—you see how I'm leaving you your response—but something distracted my attention. Your laughter told me you don't believe that. If you knew more of a man's nature you would realize that that confession is true just because it is lame. She had been nagging, for hours, and I had sunk so low that a little lower seemed just to matter. I did not think I should ever see you again. So—And then, as I tell you, something distracted my attention. Something I saw in a newspaper. I forgot all about her. Well, you don't believe it. That's where, for all your strength, Sylvia, you are a fool. Katherine, in your place, would believe it, because she knows something of men."

She whitened at that, her eyes and lips blazing their color at him. "I know that men divide their minds into compartments and their natures, too. I understood many compartments of yours. I thought I understood all. I believe now that I did not. I believe that Katherine touched the side of you I never saw—called it into being, if you like; and that therefore she has a claim upon you. I can accept easily that a newspaper would make you forget her, for a moment, just as the discovery of her intrigues has made you anxious to forget her now altogether. Therefore—"

He changed his tactics slightly. "Doesn't your sense of decency tell you the thing's absurd?" "Innumerable wives think that of faithless husbands."

Break her—he would break her for that, as she had broken him. A terrible anger against her rose in him, crossed by his longing for her as she used to be and his hatred of life that had brought them, at the journey's end, to this.

"Don't misunderstand me," said Sylvia proudly. "I do not accuse you of putting another in my place. In that sense I know you have always been faithful to me. In that sense your anger with me now tells me that you always will be—the you as I know you. I mean that the fact that there is that other side of you that can be lured by a woman whom you despise—"

"Lured!" grimaced Corbry. "The most incredible part of me, Sylvia, is that you should bring this accusation against me, based solely on some psychological half truth, when apparently you have with the greatest ease routed my enemies for me. I—I fear I have neglected to express my thanks for that."

"I don't want your thanks. I am sorry Jim let anything out. Feeling as you do toward me, I know that that knowledge hurts you, and I don't want to hurt you in that way. I was lucky. I investigated the matter and I guessed, and my guesses came off. That is all, really. You need not feel indebted to me. It was no more than a little energy in our partnership to save the ministry."

"Thanks, but please don't let that bother you," he slanted back at her. "It really does not distress me. In the last three months I think I have lost the power of being humiliated. The knowledge that my own strength was insufficient for my enemies and that it was a woman who routed them crushes me now no more than my classification with the faithless husbands simply because you have a theory as to the future of man."

"I don't take my stand on a theory," Sylvia was slipping, slipping toward abandonment and control. Her every labored word drove her nearer to the edge. "I've seen two of Katherine's friends—Mrs. Felt and Mrs. Tuckey. They told me that while you were with her—and then I went to see her, for the second time—I would not take her word for anything; but her whole manner, her every gesture, made me believe her statement that she has a claim upon you which your honor will admit, however distasteful her presence may have become to you. A claim—"

Corbry's anger rushed up in him like a fire and then was extinguished. While she had held to her accusation of him through pique, as he thought, or some strange, steady blindness, he could rage against her. But now, after three months away to let rotting on the debris of the past three months. But now—he saw; he saw, at least, that he had been wise when he feared. Three months ago, that Katherine would defeat Sylvia if they crossed swords. He tried to imagine the meeting. They had met, and Katherine had cheated and won. A clever cheat! No, far more probably a crude and blatant cheat, for Sylvia's wits could outdo any other woman's. Sylvia would have been alert for subtleties—snares. Katherine had kept to a trail so obvious that Sylvia passed it by.

"It's surprising, Sylvia. Katherine told you that. Those other unspoken women told you that. I myself deny it. You have to balance my word against the word of those women. Do you believe them in preference to me?"

"Yes, Sylvia."

"I believe that a man will lie on such a subject—any man—the best of men."

Corbry laughed. His hand went to his breast pocket and closed on the letter of Katherine's which Deagle had left with him—Deagle's tribute of charity. Corbry produced the letter in its envelope.

"I care nothing for your generalizations, nothing. You believe that I made love to Mrs. Brierly. Here, in this letter in her handwriting is conclusive proof that I did not."

The cry that came from her sent the blood pounding to his head. He could not be sure afterward, whether she spoke his name or moved toward him. He could remember only that she stretched out her hand and that, laughing still, he denied her the right to prove his pledge, and the frenzy within him burned itself out in that denial.

"The best of men will lie on such a subject, you say, my wife. I do not agree to that company. Let us say that a faithless husband will lie upon such a subject. But let us be consistent, Sylvia. If I lie to you in saying that I have not been intimate with that woman since I divorced her, you must consistently suppose that I lie when I say that I thought the proof that I have been intimate with her. I told you that I thought I had lost the power of being humiliated. I find I have not. I find that I still shrink from the humiliation of proving my words to you. You will have to go on believing that I lied when I said that this letter contains conclusive proof."

He bent down to the flames, held it until it burned down to his fingers. The daylight dazzled him. As he straightened he could not see her, but he knew she was still there by the big chair; he could hear her tempestuous breath; he could picture her clutching hands.

"Good-by," he said, and turned to the door.

She was there before him, both hands behind her holding the door knob. At the look on her face his heart shook within him.

"John, I believe you. John, if you will forgive—"

The LEOPARDESS

Program of Varied Music'Manfred' and 'Faust' Are Translated Into Tone.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Mr. Stock and his highly trained band of specialized experts, the Chicago Symphony orchestra, played the second "literary" program of the season yesterday afternoon. A literary program, be it understood, does not necessarily mean contact or even acquaintance with literature, unless such is desired. It means merely that a program is assembled from the point of view of having been inspired by or composed around certain authors, instead of following the custom of assembling it according to its own or musical logic. A rather good plan it is, too, since it gives a new point of interest to the compositions.

Byron and Goethe were coupled in this concert, with "Manfred" as translated into tone by Schumann and "Faust" as heard by the ears of Liszt and Berlioz, also with the little known tale rescued by Goethe from the Latin that served as a basis for Paul Dukas to compose "L'Apprenti Sorcier." This was music of many kinds, resting, as it should, on its merits as music, but giving rise to some of the gorgeous playing heard once in a while when the orchestra is its own soloist.

One may perhaps be pardoned for remaining in a state of decorous rather than rapturous admiration over the Schumann "Manfred" overture and the "Marguerite" movement of Liszt's "Faust" symphony. Both are specimens of respectable music, but a bit "dated." But then came the "Tschakowsky 'Manfred'" with its load of woe. Sometimes there is cause to wonder how much of it was genuine. Someone, possibly Chertok, once convicted Byron of making a pose of his own gloom by pointing out the blithe, galloping rhythm he used when he was off guard. Possibly the famous Tschakowsky was not averse to having himself pointed out as a sad person.

At all events his music received a performance that reacted into a long continued and hearty ovation for Mr. Stock and the orchestra. There was another sign of greatness in "L'Apprenti Sorcier," and still another for the "Rakoczy" march, which closed the program in a way to stir the pulses.

Faith Buys Springers
as They Gird to Fight for Their Millions

Faith or credulity—whichever it is—the Springer heirs who yesterday completed a second day's session of planning to regain their lost $500,000 fortune, have it in abundance.

Secrecy marked their meeting, for they say, sinister forces are at work to prevent them from seizing their own. "Their own" is most of the city of Wilmington, Del., which they ask for through a family tree tracing back to Charles Christopher Springer, who held the land under a royal grant in the first part of the 1700's.

The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, some seventy heirs all told, from all parts of the middle west, attended the gathering to form themselves into the Springer Heirs, incorporated—some at least preferred that name; others liked better the sound of the Springer Heirs Protective association.

George Meyers of Minneapolis, Minn., was chosen president. Today they will call a lawyer and find out whether the proceedings are legal.

As soon as the corporation is drawn up in legal form litigation will be begun, Mrs. Mary Springer McMahon, matriarch of the movement, declared. The Du Pont Powder company will be one of the defendants when the case comes to court, for the Du Pont works stand on land which is included in the heirs' claim.

Division of the property is not bothering the heirs yet. Their first aim is to get hold of it, and this the majority think will not be difficult. To most of them it is not a legal battle but a contest between right and wrong in which right is bound to win.

"I think it's just some little technical point," said one heir, a girl in the 20s. "When that is cleared up we'll get our rights."

"No, it's more than that; we'll have big interests lined up against us with lots of money," declared an older woman, who went on to tell how other heirs had agreed to join former movements but had sold out their claims for a pittance. "But we'll have money, too," she adds, "if we can only get it."

Another Lightnin' Bill
Suffers Breakdown

Indianapolis, Ind., March 2.—Milton Nobles, veteran actor, who has been playing the part of Lightnin' Bill Jones, made famous by the late Frank Bacon, in "Lightnin'," and who substituted for Bacon in the part in New York, has suffered a breakdown and today was in a local hospital. A. F. Miller, manager of the theater at which the actor was appearing, said Mr. Nobles was in need of a rest and probably would rejoin the company in Cincinnati. Mr. Nobles is 77 years old.

The Inquiring Reporter
Every Day He Asks Five
Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." For today's question Mrs. John R. Kneebone, 750 East 6th street, Peoria, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.
If you were to be marooned on a desert island, what book would you take along?

Where Asked.
Chicago public library.

The Answer.
Henry H. Morris, 6523 Greenview avenue, accountant.
Let's see. Under those circumstances such a book should contain the wisdom of the ages; it should abound with human character, and it should be in perfect harmony with nature. Perhaps a set of Shakespeare would fill that need.

Miss Sylvia Poutar, 1845 South 47th court—Oo, I'd want to take a lot of them. Snappy stories and mixed. And since I was to be on an island I'd want to read books showing what had happened there. That reminds me of a book I read, "By the World Forgot."

Edward L. Wies, 5110 North Leavitt street, structural draftsman—B-o-o-k's wouldn't do any good on a desert island. I have heard that question before, thought it over, and came to the conclusion that if I went on a desert island I wouldn't have occasion for a set of books. I'd rather have a set of tools.

Mrs. H. G. O. Lavery, 3801 Janes avenue, housewife—I suppose I'd rather take the Bible than anything else. That would afford some consolation on a lonely island. There's almost everything in that book. There's humor, there's sympathy, there's hope, it answers all the deeper questions of life.

A. L. Hanson, 4324 Vincennes avenue, psychic lecturer—I am interested in psychology—that's my study. But one wouldn't have much use for that on a desert island. There's a book called "How to Live, Here and Hereafter," and I think that would do, because I would learn how to live alone.

Swift Hall Addition to M. E. Old People's Home Is Dedicated

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.
Swift hall, the gift of the late Mrs. G. F. Swift, which now forms a wing of the Methodist Episcopal Old People's home at 1415 Foster avenue, was dedicated last evening by Bishop Thomas Nicholson, assisted by the Rev. N. E. Davis, head of the national board of hospitals and homes.

The occasion was also the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the home, which now has a property investment, including endowment, of nearly $100,000. Mrs. Swift's gift was $132,000. A gift of another addition for a summer and winter garden to cost $10,000 was announced, but the donor's name was withheld. Gifts of $6,147 were made last evening as a silver anniversary offering.

Mrs. W. A. Phillips, superintendent of the home, is the widow of the Rev. W. A. Phillips, D. D., who was pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, La Salle and Locust streets, when the old people's home was started as a Grace church enterprise. The home is now one of the three largest in the denomination, the others being in Cincinnati and Philadelphia. In her address Mrs. Phillips advocated employing a vocational guidance director so that the old people could find congenial employment.

"The porchouse of other days was a place for people to die in," said F. J. Thielbar, "but the old people's home is a place for people to live in." Thielbar was commended in special resolutions and addresses for donating his time to designing and constructing the building. Others who spoke were Dr. W. R. Wedderburn, Dr. H. V. Holt, Mrs. A. O. McLain, and Dr. Channing Barrett.

Killing Women in Fiction
Stories Called 'Poor Taste'

A woman may kill a man in fiction, but it is not "good taste" for a writer to allow one of his male characters to kill a woman character, declared Franklin Stevenson, professor of contemporary literature of De Pauw university, in a lecture last night before the Illinois Society of Press Writers in the Great Northern hotel.

Prof. Stevenson was discussing "The Modern Short Story." He said that promiscuous killing of men by women in fiction is "true to life."

"But male fiction characters should be too broad minded to kill women," he added.

British King Has German
Envoy as Luncheon Guest

LONDON, March 2.—The German ambassador, Dr. Gustav Schrammer, and his wife, accompanied by the king and queen at Buckingham palace yesterday for the first time since the war.

ASK ME! ASK ME!

By Mae Tine.
Good-morning!
H. E. G. Hold on a minute—here comes the bad news! Thomas Meighan is married. Better try to reclaim that "lost" heart while you can. His wife is Frances Rine. He'll probably answer your note if your ardor didn't scare him to death. There'll be a lot of us hissing you if it did! Thanks for the three cheers. Right back at you. You suitably write a beautiful hand!

B. C. If your friend who works on the street car line and has been so urgently advised to get into the movies will send a stamped and self-addressed envelope, we'll mail him a list of studio addresses. Tell him to hang on to his present job for awhile, though. He'll need mags to get to Los Angeles. Good-looking? Well—there are others! Here's wishing him luck, however.

MARY B. No. Niles Welch is not married that I know of. He was born in Hartford, Conn. He played for four years on the stage. Your favorite is 6 feet tall, weighs 165 pounds, has medium brown hair and dark blue eyes (alike same violet, I bet you), and his telephone number is 57188—exchange unknown. I've heard of him.

H. D. K. SOME news! Poor girl, to think she had to go and wake up MARGARET E. You might try him at the Lamoine, New York. There are two "Is" in Mr. Lytell's name. See? Yes, that's where the name came from. Love his chin, do you? How pleased he'll be to send a photograph. Glad you wrote me.

PAUL K. And that will do from you! FAN: It is a shame the way they mutilate feature pictures to bring them to program length. I disapprove. If they don't want the whole picture, let them get something else, but certainly is not fair to patrons to advertise a film and then not show more than a half or three-quarters of it. I'm wid' yez, Fan!

E. L. K. Bosh ladies have been married. Mrs. Charles Ray is a non-professional. No, I never heard she was considered "one of the great beauties." Dorothy Davenport is the maiden name of Mrs. Wallace Reid. I've got YOUR number!

TARZANA: O, my goodness! I'm terribly sorry you're good! We'll spank you in the next time she's as handsome without a "d" Write again some time, Tarzana!

See you tomorrow!

CLOSEUPS

The Chicago board of trade will be seen in the coming De Mille picture "Adam's Rim."

Viola Dana says there's nothing to the rumor that a Mrs. Dick Stewart is to sue her for alienation of affections and name her in a divorce suit. Mr. Stewart, she declares, she met while on a personal appearance tour; didn't know he was married; wrote him letters because he wrote her and because he said he was lonesome.

Thomas Meighan has just done a nice thing! He has presented the colony of lepers on the island of Canillo off the coast of Panama with a projection machine. Films will be sent them by Paramount.

Jackie Views
Time's Flight
in Stoic CalmLet's Parents Worry Over Vanishing Youth.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

His youth is his fortune, and he's getting older every minute.

But Jackie Coogan, 8 year old motion picture star, bore his increasing age happily at the Hotel Sherman yesterday, where he spent the day en route to Hollywood and another $500,000 contract.

How big can a little boy get before he's a big boy, and how old is the oldest a youngster can be before the people cease heralding him as the boy wonder, were problems that disturbed the child not at all. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Coogan permitted themselves to wonder how much longer their occupation would be "parents to the boy star."

"We aren't worried about what Jackie will be six months from now, or a year," said Mrs. Coogan. "For he seems to grow up slowly, and at every stage he is attractive."

"We used to worry," the boy's father continued, "about the 'awful time' when Jackie would lose his teeth. Well, he lost his teeth, and everybody liked his grin with its vacant spaces."

While his parents were discussing his approaching manhood, Jackie was doing a youthful hop, skip and jump between the legs of fifty sailors, who were initiating him into the Chicago Sea Scouts with formal naval ceremonies on the roof of the Hotel Sherman.

Port Master Thomas J. Keane administered the scout oath and Judge William E. Dever presented the star with the scout certificate of membership.

But Jackie assumed a conversational interest in politics only when the bystanders gave him verbal nudges. "For the youngster isn't interested in politics, or movies, or theories, or 'showing off.' He wants to do just what he wants, quickly, quietly, and without having to 'explain.'"

He isn't trying to play the part of a real boy. He is one.

Chief Justice Taft Aids
Painter Who Drops Brush

Washington, D. C., March 2.—A painter working on one of the government hotels near the capitol yesterday dropped his brush. It landed on the terrace, and he asked a large pedestrian who passed opportunely to hand it to him. The passer scrambled up the terrace and lifted the brush to the workman.

"Thanks," said the painter.

"Don't mention it," replied Chief Justice Taft.

Sweater Coat in Tweed.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There are not enough sweaters in the world, and so here is another one to fill up the gap. The new sweater is a cross between an ordinary sweater and a tweed jacket. It is a sweater with a tweed collar, and the design of the fabric is of tweed. It is, therefore, the attractive appearance of the sweater, added to the softness and warmth of the tweed.

Answers.

J. F. Suspenders are being worn more and more by men who have never worn them before. Young men, especially, are taking to suspenders, and therefore they have considered them the exclusive property of their elders. It is possible to have suspenders which are as attractive as the best of them, which takes away some of the old-fashioned note from this method of holding up the trousers.

J. H. I could not give you all the information on the general selection of clothes with regard to color combinations, etc., in these three volumes. I will give you a few hints. Toning Black Rep Up to Springtime Concert Pitch

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Which shall it be, rose or the garden wall it covers? Think fast, Maude! Embrace or submerge, with a million prints springing up around you with the rapidity of Jack's banister in the springtime garden of dress. The clever Maude will remember that she is queen rose and not trellis or garden wall. To establish the point will be her study, and the clever designer will be with her. Neutral hats with printed clothes? They are fundamental. The best houses are recommending millinery of that sort, with patterned dresses. Veiled hats, too, lend subtlety where colors tend to be blatant.

How a smart frock can manage color so that every inch counts is illustrated. Its groundwork is soft black rep. To tone it up to springtime concert pitch a strip of gay Egyptian patterning in blues and purples is chosen. Slipped in at the neck, it cunningly does its part to lead charm to the face above, the throat, the waist, and face straight down the skirt in a length giving line that ends in a point, as lines should. A bit of the embroidery peeps over the edge of the buttoned pocket.

In pongee, worked out with patterned ribbon, this would be delightful, or more of patterned goods and plain ribbon.

Sunday fashion page will be found in the New Color Section.

U. S. "SLIPPING"! EUROPE LEADS IN COAL, SHIPPING

BY SCRUTATOR.

Through the rain of international tears over poor old Europe, a right sized rainbow is beginning to shine for Europe.

Americans, who prefer to think nationally rather than to look internationally, might do well to look at it. For all those heaps of gold briguettes and coins in the basement of the New York subway and the Denver mint, Uncle Sam hasn't got everything yet. In fact the old gentleman is losing a bunch of business that looked like a pipe a year or two ago.

Some of Uncle's nephews have always felt a bit peculiar about those chin whiskers of his. Many have thought, but it gives one an uncomfortable feeling to note how comedians wear the same kind in bow ties. Where did they get the hunch?

Britain again controls the world's coal market. Although America has four-sevenths of the earth's coal and her miners beat the world's best in per capita production, we have lost out. In 1922 Britain exported 4,198,000 tons of bituminous coal, against an American output of 11,035,112. American sales abroad dropped 47 per cent. Britain's increased 140 per cent over the previous year.

Of course the strike gave Britain her big lead—the sold much coal to us—but the real point is, she's got it and isn't going to turn it loose. As in any other case, the inside is worth looking into, and we are jockeyed out of it.

The strike accounts for only a part of the change. The figures for the previous years show that while Britain was slow in climbing out of the depression, it was the world's largest coal producer and exporter. American progress while the British mines were closed in the war's aftermath was slow and unspectacular.

Britain's coal exports last year were the greatest since 1913. Ours were the smallest since that year. Last month's American exports showed improvement, but our December exports were only a fourth of Britain's.

Export business in bulky stuff like coal is closely correlated with ship ownership. With our shipping prospects tormented by senatorial phantoms, American miners will have a hard time overcoming Britain's lead. Despite all progress in oil, coal is no more obsolete on sea than land.

As to ships, the most we can show recently is an array of type in the Congressional Record. Shipbuilding is declining nearly everywhere, but America is on the first to begin—leading the procession by many lengths.

In 1922 we built 119,115 tons of ships. Britain launched 1,031,031, despite riots in Belfast and communists on the Clyde. "Other countries" put 1,114,262 tons in the water. The world built 1,874,585 tons of shipping in 1922 than in 1921. To this decrease we contributed a slump of $57,715 tons.

"Other countries" disclose an interesting old timer in the shipbuilding game, one who was supposed to be down and out. They come back in that game. One guess, folks! Of course, it's Germany.

She turns out to be the one shining exception in the world's record of shipbuilding decline. While the others are falling back, she's been launching 535,329 tons in 1922, against 509,954 in 1921. Her output for both years is ahead of her pre-war figure of 465,000 tons. A million tons of new German shipping now rides the seven seas.

Last year German shipyards turned out nearly a fourth of the ships constructed in the world. To this must be added over 40,000 tons fabricated in queer political anomaly, the German "free city" of Danzig—one of the few existing remnants of those fourteen pints—or was it quarters?

In 1913, when Germany's progress in shipbuilding was sending shivers down British spines and echoed in patriotic revivals in London playhouse and music hall, Germany was launching only 15 per cent of the world's new ships.

Britain's annual output is far below her pre-war total. The United States last year for the first time dropped below her 1913 building record.

Construction of tank ships has come to indicate a nation's progress in the world-wide struggle for oil supremacy. There were 700,000 tons of tankers built last year. Britain gained, we lost, in the construction of this class of ships.

Van Sweringens Go Ahead with Plans of Rail Merger
Cleveland, O., March 2.—Merger of the five Van Sweringens railroads into a consolidated Nickel Plate system will not be retarded by the decision of Common Pleas Judge Carl H. Smith of Suburban, Ohio, sitting here, which orders the books of the company to be exhibited by Bryan R. Dorr, a minority stockholder. The merger situation is not disturbing to Nickel Plate officials, as more than the necessary two-thirds of the stockholders of record already have signified their satisfaction with both the proposed consolidation and the basis for the exchange of stock.

Basic-Alumite.

P. V. H.—The Basic-Alumite corporation has been organized to combine the Basic-Alumite and the Basic-Alumite manufacturing company. It manufactures and sells automobile and furniture, hardware and the Alumite system for high pressure lubrication of motor cars. It is issuing $1,250,000 of 7 per cent collateral trust notes. These are a direct obligation and are secured by pledge of its entire interest in the above subsidiaries, which are given a net tangible value of $1,947,952, or over 2.5 times the notes. The trust indenture provides that subsidiaries shall not create additional liens—that combined net current assets shall always be maintained at $1,250,000—that combined indebtedness of subsidiaries, other than that incurred in conduct of business or secured by permitted liens, shall not exceed $500,000 without written consent of bond manager and trustee. Combined net earnings after federal taxes and all charges for 1922 were $1,181,776, or about 12½ times maximum interest charges and 5½ times present maximum interest charges. These notes offer an attractive investment for a business man's funds.

BY O. A. MATHER.

The growth of the "reserves" of the middle west as a reservoir of capital to be drawn on for industrial purposes and of Chicago as a securities market were well illustrated yesterday. Dealers in stocks on the Chicago stock exchange set a new high record, with total recorded sales of 116,500 shares. In addition, it was estimated that unreported odd lot tradings totaled nearly 10,000 shares.

The previous high record was established on Oct. 29, 1913, at 106,000 shares, but the low and odd records represent entirely opposite conditions. Yesterday's high mark occurred in a buoyant market, while the 1913 record came in the great post-war slump.

It should be overlooked, too, that trading in the Chicago market is largely confined to the securities of essentially Chicago industries.
